Open to Discovery – Look, Draw and Make it POP!

Animal Portraits – Animals and our Wilderness Replenished

Children – the good news is after six years of focusing on “S’more love for animals,” we observe determined efforts are bringing seals, fish penguins back to despoiled places... (our wishes answered). Spectacular ecological and humanistic restorations have occurred, wildernesses replenished and wondrous scenes of stormy petrels, fur seals, king penguins, elephant seal pups are being sighted – returning to their sense of places of their birth “homes.” Our work continues, however, as we explore the animals’ lives. We shall draw and paint portraits of animals prone to reflections – and their characteristics. We shall continue to promote hope for the abundance of species – not their extinction. We honor our natural world in painterly ways. We value animals as animal persons!

Branching out – we shall focus on selections of paintings currently held at the Whitney and Museum of Modern Art, New York City. We will emphasize the extraordinary French School and School of Paris late 19th and early 20th century artists who helped redefine Modernism and a new culture of art. Furthermore, the show at the Whitney, now assembles 60 works by forward-looking American painters, sculptors, photographers and print makers from 1900–1930. Transformative works – a time of optimism.
